

The EAT Hokey-Cokey

Just when you thought it was safe to advise on the ET's jurisdiction in wages claims...

The EAT has overturned its recent decision in Agarwal, which had said that the construction of contract terms (implied or express) - in order to decide a wages claim - was outside the ET's jurisdiction.

Questions of the construction of contract terms are, in fact, within the ET's jurisdiction.

Now let's see how long it takes for the Court of Appeal to wade in...

EAT contradicts earlier decision to hold that tribunal can construe contract in wages claim

<https://ids.thomsonreuters.com/employment-law/news/eat-co>