Introduction

Samuel is a very popular junior who has developed a busy practice covering a wide range of civil disputes, private child and financial remedy cases.

The Legal 500 recommends Samuel as a rising star in child law (public and private), stating that ‘Samuel is a fearless and impressive advocate in court. He is unafraid to give robust advice and is empathic with clients, with whom he quickly builds rapport.’

Samuel is regularly instructed by solicitors in complex claims in the County Courts and the High Court in a wide range of matters. He has a varied family practice and has experience dealing regularly with financial remedy and private child cases with complex facts and serious allegations of domestic abuse. He has particular expertise in parental alienation proceedings and is regularly instructed in such cases.

Samuel has a busy paperwork practice and is regularly instructed to advise on civil and family matters or to draft pleadings.

He is able to provide advice at all stages of a case, from pre-action through to trial, the assessment of costs and enforcement.

Family Law

Samuel is regularly instructed to deal with matters following divorce, to act at all stages of proceedings from FDA to FDR and final hearings. He takes an objective, yet sensitive approach to resolving his clients’ issues, taking time to build a relationship and understand their needs and objectives. However, whilst taking a sensitive approach to his clients’ situations, he is also developing a reputation for robust representation in Court.

Samuel has a varied family practice and has experience dealing with Children Act proceedings involving complex facts and serious allegations of domestic abuse.

He has particular expertise in parental alienation proceedings and is regularly instructed in such cases by solicitors and on a direct access basis.

He recently obtained an order for an interim change of residence and a suspension of contact in a case involving parental alienation.
