Stefan has a well-established practice in employment, housing and landlord & tenant law. His clients range from individuals to local authorities and multinational businesses. Stefan offers straightforward and practical advice, and a thorough and measured approach to litigation.

Solicitors have described Stefan's preparation and delivery at court as "excellent" and commented that he "is extremely personable and manages to put the client at ease." Feedback from lay clients includes: "Within my twenty years of dealing with a variety of lawyers, very few have come across the way that Stefan presents himself and his client, putting their interests and welfare first".

Stefan has been a member of 42BR Barristers, where he undertook pupillage, since 2014. Before coming to the Bar he worked in the Property, Family & Trusts team at the Law Commission and as a visiting tutor in Property Law at King's College London. He is a co-author of Daniel Barnett's Employment Law Handbook (8th edition, 2020).

Property Law

Stefan's property practice focuses on landlord & tenant matters, both residential and commercial. He advises and represents clients in cases ranging from straightforward possession claims to complex leasehold disputes.
