Introduction

Philip Newman was called to the Bar in 1977. For several years he practised as a litigation solicitor and partner in a central London firm before returning to practise at the Bar in 1995.

His main areas of practice include:

- contract and commercial disputes;
- professional negligence;
- professional discipline and regulation;
- general chancery and company litigation (including shareholder and director disputes and disputes concerning civil fraud, breach of fiduciary duty and misrepresentation); and
- partnership law and practice.

He is used to undertaking a wide range of civil, commercial and chancery litigation and to dealing with urgent interlocutory hearings and making and opposing applications for emergency relief (e.g. freezing orders, civil search orders) He has developed a niche practice in VAT tribunal work (including MTIC carousel fraud) alongside his well-known specialism in disciplinary and regulatory work encompassing a wide range of different professions – this includes his advising and acting for doctors and surgeons before the GMC, chartered certified accountants before the ACCA, barristers and solicitors before their professional bodies, architects before the Architects Registration Board, surveyors facing complaints by the RICS, as well as prosecuting cases for some professional Institutes and sitting as a Legal Assessor on disciplinary tribunals and panels, including that of the Institution of Structural Engineers. He is on the Panel of Case Presenters for the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators. He is noted as a Leading Practitioner under the category of “Professional Discipline” in Chambers & Partners Directory 2011, wherein he is highly praised for being ‘very approachable and understanding’.

He also sits as an arbitrator (holding the Diploma in International Commercial Arbitration) and as a commercial mediator (accredited by The Academy of Experts of which he was Vice-Chairman and Deputy Chairman over a period of several years) and he has received appointments as mediator in commercial disputes from the President of the Law Society.

Accreditations

“Philip Newman represents myriad professional defendants – although he is perhaps best known for his work before regulatory bodies governing accountancy, medicine and the legal profession” – Chambers and Partners
